Waiting too long to check out new Ikea on the Peninsula

I AM wondering why the council is taking so long to give the go ahead to IKEA. My wife is constantly asking me to find out so that we will not have to cross the river, a dreadful experience at any time of day, in order to visit this excellent store. I recently received a very pleasant message from them, and decided to support them, hopefully with your assistance. I can think of no valid reason why the company cannot be allowed to join the many other businesses that offer an excellent service to residents in the borough. Secondly, we often go to the excellent new Waitrose. If we arrive from Greenwich it is 'no right turn' into Waitrose, so we have to go straight on then turn into the fuel station in order to turn left. When we leave we often go to a restaurant in Greenwich, and of course it's 'no left turn' when we leave. Same solution. The alternative is go via Blackheath Hill, a lorry route. I can see no valid reason for these signs, save to punish people wishing to travel to or from Greenwich village. I realise this is rather long winded, but hope that you can help.

Maurice and June Richards, Shooter's Hill

● A council spokesperson said: "The council approved outline approval for an IKEA Store last year. IKEA are now developing their detailed proposals and we expect a reserve matter application to be submitted later this year. This application will deal with the detailed design of the store. The vehicular access arrangements to the development at Greenwich Reach that includes the Waitrose store were agreed as part of the planning consent. Certain turns into and out of the development are banned so as to discourage drivers from passing through Greenwich Town Centre which already suffers from too much through traffic. With a little extra journey planning those visitors to the development that need to use their cars can do so without too much inconvenience."

Dalai Lama visits

TIBETAN residents help to lead the celebrations marking a visit of the Dalai Lama to the O2 Arena.

The royal borough has the country's largest Tibetan community and community reps were joined by the Mayor Norman Adams for the event at Woolwich town Hall on September 18 – the day before the Dalai Lama was due to appear at the O2 as part of a nine-day tour.

During the event children sang traditional songs and Buddhist prayers were read out. Prominent Tibetan singer, Ngawang Lodup also performed at the event. To mark the visit of the holy figure of the Buddhist faith, the big screen in Woolwich was showed images from Tibet and of the Dalai Lama.

Tsering Passang, chairman of the Tibetan Community in Britain and organiser said: "We are so delighted and very fortunate to meet and hear His Holiness for the second time this year in the UK. This year is an auspicious one as it marks His Holiness' 80th birthday."

Greenwich Mayor Cllr Norman Adams said: "We welcome His Holiness the Dalai Lama to the Royal Borough of Greenwich. His visit is particularly fitting as our borough is home to the UK's largest population of Tibetan residents who are contributing positively to our local area as well as sharing their wonderful culture with us."

SMART SERVICEMAN: a young Henry Kenny

Cllr John Fahy and representatives from the Woolwich Royal Artillery Barracks also attended, and members of Sergeant Kenny's family, including his great nephew Stephen Kenny, were among the guests.

Stephen Kenny told GT: "My family has always been proud of his story, although it is something we have always known about, it wasn't something that generation spoke about much. The experience of digging deeper into our family history has been great and brought us together as a family. This remembrance is special, it provides the community with some pride, and he would have liked that because he was a community person and this is a reminder of the bravery of a generation gone by."

As well as the memorial stones for VC heroes, the royal borough is also honouring the war dead by working to renovate and conserve local war memorials.

Greenwich Mayor, Cllr Norman Adams said: "We are rightly proud of our historic links with the armed services. For many people war memorials provide an opportunity for quiet reflection but they also act as a landmark of civic pride. That is why we are committed to ensuring all our war memorials are renovated and conserved as a lasting tribute."

Deborah Wiles whose grandfather was Henry's brother, said: "It was a very dignified and wonderful ceremony and he has been treated as the hero that he was in an era when some heroes are forgotten. I hope the stone is a reminder of the sacrifices made by his generation so that we can live freely in this country today."

Martin Wiles attended with his wife Annette Wiles and sister Deborah. He told GT: "Our family has a rich military history, much like Woolwich, my father served during the Second World War too. It was a proud moment for us as a family and we hope he will never be forgotten."

Born in 1988, Henry Edward Kenny served as Private in the 1st Battalion, Loyal North Lancashire Regiment in 1915 and had been promoted to Sergeant by the end of the First World War. During the Battle of Loos, Henry went out six times to rescue injured men, each time under heavy fire, and was wounded in the process. He died peacefully on May 6 1979 in Surrey. His Victoria Cross medal is now in the Imperial War Museum.

Visit Greenwich, a tourism company set up by the royal borough to grow the local tourism industry and raise the profile of Greenwich for the benefit of businesses, visitors and residents.

The company is responsible for promoting Greenwich and the surrounding area as a leading leisure and business destination in London. It welcomed its 100th business partner after just 18 months of operation.

In 12 months, Visit Greenwich has seen its commercial income grow by 50% to over £500,000 a year. It means that more than half a million pounds a year is being ploughed back into growing the local tourism industry.

Visit Greenwich chief executive Barrie Kelly said: "We have seen the centre of London shift eastwards since the London 2012 Olympics and Paralympics with major increases in growth and investment, highlighting the importance of the Greenwich Peninsula and the surrounding area. We see an exciting period of growth immediately ahead of us."

Cllr Miranda Williams, the royal borough's cabinet member for culture and creative industries said:

"Tourism is such an important part of our local economy and is a vital contributor to the borough overall. We've always been proud of being a world-recognised destination here in Royal Greenwich and in recent years we've seen our tourist industry and status as a leading visitor destination really surge forward."

has had a clear vision to grow the local tourism industry and it's very pleasing to see this is producing such positive results."

FLOCKING TO ROYAL GREENWICH: Visitors fill the town centres for recent events

We have a wealth of attractions and activities to offer here and have the infrastructure and new hotels to support the local tourism industry, which is benefitting residents and creating thousands of new jobs and new opportunities for local people. The Council

Centres of attraction

THIS year saw the re-launch of the much-loved Eltham Palace with over 100,000 visitors forecast for the year, along with major plans to upgrade the Greenwich Market, scheduled for completion in March 2016. The O2 continues to go from strength to strength with plans confirmed for a luxury retail development opening in 2017.

In December, Greenwich welcomes the arrival of a new 5 star hotel, the InterContinental London The O2, bringing 452 new bedrooms and creating more than 400 new jobs, including 25 apprenticeship opportunities in the area.

The MBNA Thames Clippers is investing £6.5million on two new high speed vessels operating across London providing additional capacity across the Thames river network. And Greenwich will see major investment in 2017 when London's first cruise terminal comes to Enderby Wharf, where up to 55 cruise ships a year will be expected to dock at the new terminal. The new scheme will create up to 500 new jobs and includes 477 new homes, a skills academy, restaurants, cafes and bars.

Over in nearby Woolwich, the royal borough is leading on the creation of a cultural and heritage quarter at the Royal Arsenal, along with new retail space over 5 years; and Crossrail stations for Woolwich and Abbey Wood arriving in 2018.

Cllr Sizwe James, the borough's cabinet member for business, employment and skills, said: "These hugely significant developments taking place across the destination mean that visitors are keen to stay longer and spend more in the royal borough, and businesses are recognising the impressive potential of Greenwich and the surrounding area."

High Street haven

TRAFALGAR Road from Greenwich Park towards the Blackwall Tunnel is set to 'go green' thanks to a project being developed by East Greenwich Residents' Association and the council.

Called "Greening Trafalgar Road" the project is seeking to create a better environment along Trafalgar Road with some ideas such as installation of planters alongside the roadside barriers and a possible covered area for seating in an under-used alleyway. The project also wants to encourage community groups to make more use of street trading licences so they can have stalls on the streets.

The council has secured £18,000 from the London Mayor's 'Spacehive' fund for community-led High Street projects. The East Greenwich Residents Association has already raised £6,250 to meet the project's target, helped by 'crowdfunding'.

Shade Abdul, the association's planning spokesperson, said: "We have developed our project working with a company that is focused on solving air quality issues in cities with greening solutions. Improving our local high street and making it more inviting, will also help to improve our local economy."

"We are thankful for the council's support, and we are looking forward to working with them to agree which projects to pursue together to turn our dream of a better and greener Trafalgar Road into a reality."

Cllr Danny Thorpe, the council's cabinet member for regeneration and transport, said: "The council were approached by the East Greenwich Residents Association for assistance in submitting the bid and I am delighted we have been successful. Now we have the funding committed I am looking forward to working with the residents' association to develop and implement the ideas. I am keen that this initiative ties in with existing council initiatives such as the HILL project where work on highway improvements is done by local unemployed young people as part of a training package."

Wheel keep you riding

by Dan Stephens

THE royal borough is doing everything possible to help residents get on their bikes this autumn with maintenance classes, guided rides and advice to help them make the most of cycling.

The council runs maintenance classes and guided bike rides regularly throughout the year to help encourage new and returning cyclists. Thirty guided bike rides have been held in the royal borough this year, taking place in Greenwich, Charlton, Thamesmead, Woolwich and Eltham. The rides usually involve around six or seven people but can accommodate up to 15 people.

The royal borough also works with the Met to reduce cycle theft through bike marking which helps in the identification of stolen bikes and assist owner recovery. Throughout the year the Police offer a free BikeRegister cycle marking service - which involves marking bikes with a unique reference number and semi-tamperproof sticker.

Earlier this month the council hosted the first Cycling Forum where residents could give feedback on current plans to improve facilities for cyclists.

The council also wants to hear from local people who have suggestions about how cycling can be improved in Royal Greenwich. Requests for cycle parking, repair and installation of cycle signage, suggestions involving cycle paths and any other ideas are all welcome.

Cllr Danny Thorpe the cabinet member for regeneration and transport, said:

"Cycling is good fun, great for fitness and helps the environment. It has never been a better time to get involved – whether you are discovering the joys of cycling for the first time or getting back on your bike after a time off it."

Just the job

by Dan Stephens

AROUND a thousand jobhunters got to meet the bosses of 50 local firms when they clocked in for an autumn jobs fair last Friday.

Two hundred people came through the doors within the first hour of the event at the Valley, home of Charlton Athletic. They came to discuss potential opportunities with local employers, and took part in workshops to help them search for jobs and develop employment skills.

The event was organised jointly by the MP for Greenwich and Woolwich Matthew Pennycook and the council, and was attended by Cllr Sizwe James, the council's cabinet member for business, employment and skills.

Cllr James said: "Providing training and job opportunities is a key priority for the council and I am proud that we have helped over 18,500 residents into work through our GLLab service. We will continue to work with partners such as Job Centre Plus and MP Matthew Pennycook to build on this in the future."

Matthew Pennycook said: "As an MP you can't create jobs but you can bring employers together with local residents keen to take advantage of the opportunities provided. Lots of people I have spoken to are enthused about this event and the opportunities available and we have also had great feedback from the employers. It is something I hope to do every year – working with the council and Job Centre Plus to maximise opportunities for our local residents."

Kofi Ahem from Charlton told GT: "Not everyone gets the opportunity to have a choice of employment shown to them in this way. It's really good for the community and the borough. Young people will benefit particularly as in this day and age it isn't always that easy to find

SEAL OF APPROVAL: Cllr James and Matthew Pennycook meet local resident Barbara at a stall for InterContinental London – who will provide 400 jobs for local people when its new hotel on the Greenwich Peninsula opens next year.

Elina Homenko, also from Charlton added: "It's good to have training providers and employers all her under one roof."

Barbara from Plumstead said: "I read about this event in Greenwich Time. I have been to the NHS and Lloyds stalls and a few others and there is so much info about graduate courses and apprenticeships. I'm so excited and I hope they do more events like these in the future."

Carnival fun in the sun

by Dan Stephens

ALMOST 4,000 people turned out to enjoy the wonderful Woolwich Carnival last week (Sep 19). Visitors were treated to a sunny day for the colourful community parade, which saw around 500 school and community groups taking part.

The procession began at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, before marching through the streets of the town centre, ending in General Gordon Square. There were a range of stalls selling crafts and international food, whilst steel drums, dancers and singers entertained the crowds. The main stage in the square also played host to Unit 137, a collective of DJs and artists from the local area.

The event was organised by the Woolwich Community Carnival Committee with funding from Royal Borough Community Arts Fund to support a series of participatory workshops. There was additional support from Big Lottery Fund, The Monument Trust and Oxleas NHS Trust.

The Big London ENERGY SWITCH

A scheme to help Londoners get a better deal on their gas and electricity bills

Over 5000 Greenwich residents have registered for the Big London Energy Switch since the scheme began. The results from February 2015 were the best yet – with average savings in Greenwich of over £250 and winning tariffs better than anything available direct from suppliers or via price comparison services.

How does the scheme work?

- Ⓔ The Big London Energy Switch is a collective switching scheme being run by the Royal Borough of Greenwich and a number of other councils in London
- Ⓔ By gathering together a large number of people who want to lower their gas and electricity bills the Big London Energy Switch, using a third party 'switching provider', can encourage energy companies to offer their lowest prices
- Ⓔ Once registration is closed, all the energy companies are invited to offer their best prices to everyone who registered
- Ⓔ You will then receive details of exactly how much money you could potentially save by switching if you accept the offer
- Ⓔ You can choose to accept the offer or not

Switch and save

by Simon Banks

SAVE big and switch, says the Royal Borough of Greenwich which is backing a London-wide scheme to help residents get a better deal on their gas and electricity bills.

The Big London Energy Switch is a collective switching scheme, backed by 17 London boroughs. It encourages residents to sign up to a collective giving them greater bargaining power with energy companies who are more likely to offer their lowest prices for energy.

Residents still have time to sign up to the switch, with the next round of registration set to close on October 12. Once registration is closed all the energy companies are invited to offer their best prices to everyone who registered.

Residents will receive details of exactly how much money they could potentially save with an option to accept or decline the switch.

The 'Big London Energy Switch' has been championed by Royal Greenwich, which has seen one of the largest number of sign ups of all London boroughs, with over 4400 residents having already registered.

Latest figures for Greenwich show householders made an average annual saving of £254.

Cllr Danny Thorpe, the royal borough's cabinet member for regeneration and transport, said: "We've always backed the Big London Energy Switch as it's such a great way to help our residents save money on their household bills. Encouraging sign ups is an important part of our anti-poverty work – household bills and fuel prices in particular are placing real pressures on most households so we will do whatever we can to help people save money."

"We're also reminding residents they can also make changes to their home and their lifestyles to save energy and lower bills – call the royal borough's energy helpline if you want some advice."

Don't miss out on gas safety check

VITAL CHECK: get a boiler inspection by a Gas Safe registered engineer

The council's gas safety team has worked tirelessly visiting a total of 22,000 properties in order to ensure residents have safe and reliable gas boilers in their homes.

Over 70% of residents had equipment serviced during the last six months, although due to the high demand of the service and some tenants not being present at home when the service called, some missed out. The council is appealing for any council tenants who missed out to contact the gas delivery team in order to schedule or re-book a free gas boiler service. Residents can also inquire about having a free CO detector installed in their home too.

The campaign was the fifth annual Gas Safety Week and helped raise awareness of the dangers of poorly maintained gas appliances, which cause gas leaks, fires, explosions and carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning. In the last year, at least 68,000 homes in the UK escaped deadly gas incidents by engineers switching off dangerous appliances. Nearly one in two of these incidents were caused because a gas appliance had not been regularly serviced and had been left in a poor state.

By law, only Gas Safe registered engineers can work on gas appliances. Twenty deaths and 1,000 gas-related injuries have been caused in the last three years and an estimated quarter of a million illegal gas jobs carried out every year.

● Contact the gas delivery team to schedule or re-book a free boiler service on 0800 317 715

WINTER is around the corner and residents are being urged to keep safe as well as warm by making sure their gas boilers are safe and reliable.

The warning comes from the royal borough on the back of National Gas Safety Week, a national campaign which ran from September 14-20 to raise awareness of gas safety issues.

Eltham in credit

ALREADY SIGNED UP: Clive Efford with Penny Nicholls from New Eltham and Alf Brooks from the Coldharbour Estate who explain how the credit union benefits them

by Dan Stephens

MP Clive Efford visited the new branch of Greenwich & Bexley Credit Union at the Eltham Centre last week (Sep 22) to meet staff and customers and see the facilities first-hand. The Eltham MP talked to staff, directors and volunteers, and was introduced to local members benefiting from the credit union's new convenient location in the heart of Eltham.

He also learned about credit union partnership projects with the council, as well as the outreach work designed to encourage local membership.

Financial services from the credit union include affordable loans, secure savings and ethical finance offering a safe alternative to payday loans. Over the last 17 years it has made £25 million of loans, enabling its members to go on holiday, improve their homes, get married, buy school uniforms, pay off outstanding debts, and many other things.

In addition to opening the new branch in Eltham in May, the credit union also celebrated its 10,000th member earlier this year.

Clive Efford MP told GT: "I am delighted that the Greenwich & Bexley Credit Union has opened a new branch in the Eltham Centre. I have joined as a member and encourage others to visit the branch and do the same as it will help it to expand in Eltham. More people need to know how credit unions work so they can save safely, borrow responsibly and avoid being exploited by payday loan companies."

Credit Union manager Kay Campbell said: "The success of our new branch office in the Eltham Centre has been overwhelming with hundreds of visits in just a few months. It has gained us very many new happy customers who are taking control of their money and recommending us to friends and family."

To join the credit union you must be aged 16 or over and live or work in the borough. Under 16s are welcome to join the credit union's young saver scheme.

Ofsted: Deansfield is simply 'outstanding'

GREAT AMBASSADORS: pupils were praised as friendly, courteous and polite

DEANSFIELD Primary School in Rochester Way, Eltham, has been graded as 'outstanding' in every way following a two-day inspection by the schools' watchdog Ofsted.

Inspectors gave it full marks for the quality of teaching, pupils' achievement and their behaviour, their safety, the school's leadership and management, and its provision for early years.

In their report, the three inspectors agreed that the pupils were "great ambassadors for the school", adding "they are friendly, courteous and polite." They said the headteachers, governors and staff were passionate about Deansfield, and worked together extremely well. As a result, they said, the standards of teaching, behaviour and achievement were outstanding.

The inspectors sat in on 22 lessons, met different groups of pupils, and took account of the views of 80 parents and around 300 pupils who were surveyed. Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for children's services, said: "Congratulations Deansfield for such a great result. Hard work and commitment by the leadership team, governing body and all staff has shone through."

CACT to run royal borough youth services for three more years

CHARLTON Athletic Community Trust will continue to run youth services for the royal borough's young citizens for a further three years.

The Trust has been running services and activities for young people on behalf of the borough since 2012 and a decision to continue the partnership until 2019 was agreed earlier this month. It means CACT can carry on with developing and improving its programme for young people across the royal borough.

It currently runs a minimum of 60-70 sessions during the week and 20-30 throughout the holidays. Activities are arranged across eight themes: Careers and Employment, Digital Media, Sport and Health, Arts and Culture, Music and Performing Arts, Skills for Life, Volunteering and Discovering the Royal Borough.

The youth service also delivers nationally recognised programmes such as The Duke of Edinburgh Award Scheme and is developing a young social enterprise programme.

Rising musician Autumn Sharif was a regular at the Woolwich Common Youth Hub where she made the most of its facilities to kick start her career in the music industry. She went on to open for rock band Lawson in front of 2,300 fans at the Indigo at the O2, before progressing to the finals of the television talent show

The Voice earlier this year.

She told GT: "I used to go every Thursday and it's where I recorded my first cover. I put it on YouTube and that's how it started. The staff told me I could sing and to go for it. If I didn't have that encouragement, then I wouldn't have pursued my career."

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "Young people deserve the best possible future, and the council is determined to provide all the support that we can, to enable them to achieve this."

"We remain committed to ensuring that young people have access to good quality youth services, and our successful partnership with Charlton Athletic Community Trust ensures that we can continue to do this for years to come."

Marc Leckie, director of youth and inclusion at the Trust told GT: "We are fully committed to further improving the service for youth in the area, providing a range of activities, opportunities and pathways for all involved. We are open to getting feedback from young people as we look at all elements to accommodate, deliver and develop a modern day service."

STOPTOBER, the biggest stop smoking challenge of its kind, is returning next month and residents who smoke are being encouraged to consider signing up for it now. The 28-day stop smoking challenge (starting October 1) is delivered by Public Health England and backed by the council, and helps smokers to quit for good.

Stoptober has enjoyed great success in the royal borough since it started in 2012. Over the past two years, it has engaged with thousands of people, and over 170 people have successfully quit smoking just from this campaign. Nationally, over 250,000 smokers across England and Wales were estimated to have stubbed out their cigarettes during last year's Stoptober.

Cllr Denise Scott-McDonald, the royal borough's cabinet member for community wellbeing and public health said: "Smoking is responsible for one in every five deaths in adults aged over 35 in England, and half of all long-term smokers will die prematurely due to a smoking-related disease. Giving up smoking increases your chances of living a longer and healthier life, even if you've smoked for 40 years.

"As anyone who's given up can tell you, the benefits to your feelings of wellbeing – as well as to your wallet – begin early and can last for the rest of your life. Of course giving up is a real challenge, but the aim of the Stoptober campaign is to remind people that you are not alone and there is support available."

Smoking increases the risk of stroke, heart disease and lung cancer. It also affects circulation and fertility, as well as speeding up the ageing process of your skin. Stopping smoking can make a drastic improvement to your lifestyle and health with both immediate and long-term benefits. Those who quit for more than 28 days will notice health, physical and financial benefits and an improved sense of taste and smell, as well as reducing their risk of heart and lung disease.

Dr Ellen Wright, local GP and chair of NHS Greenwich Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) told GT: "If you can stop smoking for 28 days, you are five times more likely to stay smoke free. If you smoke, giving up is probably the biggest single step you can take to improve your health and I'd encourage anyone who wants to give up smoking to sign up for Stoptober."

The law is changing

This year's campaign coincides with a number of changes in the law, introduced by the government. From October 1 2015 it will be illegal:

- for retailers to sell electronic cigarettes (e-cigarettes) or e-liquids to someone under 18
- for adults to buy (or try to buy) tobacco products or e-cigarettes for someone under 18
- to smoke in private vehicles that are carrying someone under 18.

Secondhand smoke is dangerous for anyone, but children are especially vulnerable, because they breathe more rapidly and have less developed airways, lungs and immune systems. Over 80 per cent of cigarette smoke is invisible and opening windows does not remove its harmful effect. The law is changing to protect children and young people from such harm. Visit www.greenwichstopsmoking.org.uk

Challenge to quit

From October 1, government will make it illegal to smoke in public places where under 18 are present. Now there's one more reason to quit. Luckily the Stop tober campaign is around the corner with advisers wanting to wave goodbye to cigarettes. Find out what's available

Get help giving up

THE royal borough will once again be working with Charlton Athletic Community Trust to ensure that stop smoking advisers are out and about throughout the borough during October. Advisers will be giving out goody bags, which will have a quit kit, along with Smokefree Homes and Cars kits to passers-by interested in quitting.

Residents can get advice on stopping smoking throughout the year at one of the royal borough's drop in centres. Support on offer includes advice for pregnant women and new mums, stop smoking sessions for young people, 'Quit' sessions for smokers who are mobility impaired and information on workplace-based stop smoking campaigns.

Local drop in centres are based at the following locations:

- Tuesdays, 10am-5pm at Valley Central, SE7
- Wednesdays, 10am-5pm at the Eltham Centre, SE9
- Thursdays 12pm-7pm at Thamesmere Leisure Centre, SE28

- Fridays 10am-3pm, at Clover Health Centre

CELEBRATIONS to mark the independence of Botswana and a visit by the High Commissioner of Botswana are part of the events for Black History Month in the royal borough.

Charlton House is hosting a comprehensive programme of events starting on Friday October 2.

The programme has been organised by Global Fusion Music and Arts and supported by Charlton Triangle Homes and Charlton House. A concert featuring performances from visiting Botswana artist Masego Woki and the Kalahari Band, led by her husband Aubrey Woki, promises to be a lively event not to be missed, with some strong Southern African rhythms and beautiful melodies.

Masego will be performing songs from her latest album 'Gae Ke Ko Kae', translated as 'Where is Home?' which has been released on the GFMA record label.

Children can also get in on the action too with free African-themed workshops on Saturday October 3, from 2-5pm with dance, clay mask making, Batik fabric-making, face painting, drumming, singing and other crafts on offer.

In the evening, there'll be a screening of African films in the Grand Salon from 7.30pm, admission for a £3 donation.

GFMA has also been working with Greenwich Theatre to present 'The Women of Kampala', a production that brings together five well-known Ugandan female singers with a six-piece band for an uplifting rich East African rhythmic performance. The show ranges from Congolese dance music to deeply traditional Ugandan music and soothing Ugandan ballads at Greenwich Theatre on October 14.

GFMA project manager Louisa Le Marchand said: "They are a group of singers from the city of Kampala, living in England. They are also fantastic dancers and actresses in their own right."

Artists quick on the draw

FIVE local artists have put pencil to paper for a showcase of etching in black and white. Their works are on display at West Greenwich Library for a free exhibition running until October 24.

The artists include former docker turned artist Terry Scales, Cristiana Angelini, Peter Tingey, Irene Butcher and Graham Smith. Their brief was to present drawings, etchings and relief reprints which explore figurative imagery in black and white and the result is a varied display of pencil work with something that will appeal to everyone.

The event is supported by the royal borough and Terry told GT: "Our desire through the act of drawing is to sharpen people's sense of observation. As five local artists we are most grateful to the London Borough of Greenwich for supporting our event."

During the event there's a chance to meet the artists and discuss their work with the second of two meet-and-greet sessions taking place on Friday October 9 at 2pm.

The display is open Mon 2-7pm, Tue 9am-5.30pm, Thu 9am-7pm, Fri 2-5.30pm Sat 9am-5.30pm.

WHEN the National Portrait Gallery commissioned Hans Schwarz to create a stunning work of art in 1984, it was unveiled to critical acclaim. It saw the final two decades of his career flourish as other national galleries, museums and even The Queen Mother snapped up works by him. A powerful draughtsman, he also had a natural way with colour. Greenwich recurred as a background and he produced ambitious panoramas of the town, the Isle of Dogs, Canary Wharf and the east London skyline from the privileged vantage point of his home and studio on Point Hill. His work features in a month-long exhibition at the M1 Fine Art Gallery from October 1 to November 1. 'Hans Schwarz - The Greenwich Years' is the first major exhibition of work by the Vienna-born expressionistic painter since his death in Greenwich in 2003.

All works displayed were created during the final 33 years of the artist's life and depict local residents and/or the local area of Greenwich.

M1 Fine Art Gallery is at 20 Nelson Road, Greenwich Town Centre, SE10 9JB, open weekdays 10am - 6pm, Saturday & Sunday 9am - 7pm. Visit www.m1fineart.com have appeared at the Commonwealth Youth Games including Jessica Ennis-Hill and fellow Greenwich Starting Blocks athlete, Zoe Smith.

The young athlete from Abbey Wood is backed by Greenwich Starting Blocks, the royal borough charity which supports aspiring athletes. She admits the tournament did not go as well as planned after coming fourth in the discus, with a throw of 42.44m, and failing to qualify for the final eight in the shot put. But she sees it as invaluable experience that is sure to stand her in good stead for the future.

Divine said: "The experience has been great and I take it as a learning curve. I will remain positive and continue to work hard and build on these experiences to become a better and stronger athlete. It was an honour to represent my country and my sincere appreciation goes to England athletics for giving me this opportunity."

"To take part in such a global competition was a truly amazing experience which also provided the opportunity to make new friends within the England team as well as with athletes from other countries. It was also great working with the very supportive England team managers."

The former St Ursula's school pupil is already targeting more opportunities for success as she competes in the European Athletics Champion Clubs Cup Juniors, representing Blackheath and Bromley in Istanbul, Turkey from September 18th. Not one to shy away from a challenge, Divine will be competing in the heavier senior weight of 4kg in the shot put event in Turkey, although she usually competes using the 3kg shot put.

The athlete will turn her focus to her education after the athletics season as she prepares to start studying for A-Levels in maths, economics, chemistry and biology.

"After competing in Turkey, I will be taking a short break as the season comes to an end. Hopefully I will return next season as a bigger and better athlete after learning so much from these events," she told GT.
